The Sanskrit Epics J. L. Brockington 1998 Mah bh rata (including Harivam a) and R m yan a, the two great Sanskrit Epics central to the whole of Indian Culture, form the subject of this new work. The book begins by examining the relationship of the epics to the Vedas and the role of the bards who produced them. The core of the work, a study of the linguistic and stylistic features of the epics, precedes the examination of the material culture, the social, economic and political aspects, and the religious aspects. The final chapter presents the wider picture and in conclusion even looks into the future of epic studies. In this long overdue survey work the author synthesizes the results of previous scholarship in the field. Herewith a coherent view is built up of the nature and the significance of these two central epics, both in themselves, and in relation to Indian culture as a whole.

Lineage Organization in Tribal Society Rahul Sen 1992 The book highlights the various cultural aspects of the Munda, the only known tribe of India, who retain a communal land holding system—the Mundari Khuntkatti system, recognised and sanctioned by the State. The author has emphasised that the Indian tribes cannot be comprehended by the Lineage Theory, which analyses the function of descent and lineage systems as multifunctional institutions structuring the kinship and political organisation of simple societies, as developed by the British functionalists. Indian tribes since ancient times have been in contact and even integrated into the larger Hindu Society. Thus they are not purely lineage-based societies. Lineage theory has been made dynamic as modified by the author to encompass such a situation.

Sanskrit is Fun Part 1 Warwick Jessup 2012-01-01 The first group of books entitled Sanskrit is Fun (Parts I-III) introduce the learners to the Devanagari alphabets, grouping the letters according to their place of articulation, called 'Family', which comprises both the vowels and consonants. Learners are first taught how to draw the letters. Learning and teaching is also helped by the humorous presentation of the letters in the form of animals figures. The next step is to add vowel to the consonants, and then to teach joint (compound) consonants. Finally words and sentences are formed.
