Swift: English Men of Letters Series Sir Leslie Stephen 2020-09-28 Thomas Swift married Elizabeth Dryden, niece of Sir Erasmus, the grandfather of the poet Dryden. By her he became the father of ten sons and four daughters. In the great rebellion he distinguished himself by a loyalty which was the cause of obvious complacency to his descendant. On one occasion he came to the governor of a town held for the king, and being asked what he could do for his Majesty, laid down his coat as an offering. The governor remarked that his coat was worth little. "Then," said Swift, "take my waistcoat." The waistcoat was lined with three hundred broad pieces—a handsome offering from a poor and plundered clergyman. On another occasion he armed a ford, through which rebel cavalry were to pass, by certain pieces of iron with four spikes, so contrived that one spike must always be uppermost (caltrops, in short). Two hundred of the enemy were destroyed by this stratagem. The success of the rebels naturally led to the ruin of this cavalier clergyman; and the record of his calamities forms a conspicuous article in Walker's Sufferings of the Clergy. He died in 1658, before the advent of the better times in which he might have been rewarded for his loyal services. His numerous family had to struggle for a living. The eldest son, Godwin Swift, was a barrister of Gray's Inn at the time of the Restoration: he was married four times, and three times to women of fortune; his first wife had been related to the Ormond family; and this connexion induced him to seek his fortune in Ireland—a kingdom which at that time suffered, amongst other less endurable grievances, from a deficient supply of lawyers. Godwin Swift was made Attorney-General in the palatinate of Tipperary by the Duke of Ormond. He prospered in his profession, in the subtle parts of which, says his nephew, he was "perhaps a little too dexterous;" and he engaged in various speculations, having at one time what was then the very large income of 3000l. a year. Four brothers accompanied this successful Godwin, and shared to some extent in his prosperity. In January, 1666, one of these, Jonathan, married to Abigail Erick, of Leicester, was appointed to the stewardship of the King's Inns, Dublin, partly in consideration of the loyalty and suffering of his family. Some fifteen months later, in April, 1667, he died, leaving his widow with an infant daughter, and seven months after her husband's death, November 30, 1667, she gave birth to Jonathan, the younger, at 7, Hoey's Court, Dublin.

Letters to the Lost Iona Grey 2016 1943: in the ruins of blitzed London Stella Thorne and Dan Rosinski meet by chance, and fall in love by accident. Theirs is a reluctant, unstoppable affair in which all the odds are stacked against them: she is newly married, and he is an American bomber pilot whose chance of survival is just one in five. He promises to love her forever and, 70 years later, makes one final attempt to find the girl he has never forgotten, sending a letter to the house where they shared a brief yet perfect happiness. But Stella has gone, and the letter is opened by Jess, a young girl hiding from problems of her own. As she reads his words, she is captivated by the story of a love affair that burned so bright and dimmed too soon. Can she help Dan find Stella before it is too late?

The Lost Explorer Conrad Anker 1999-12-22 This is the adventure story of the year -- how Conrad Anker found the body of George Mallory on Mount Everest, casting an entirely new light on the mystery of the explorer who may have conquered Everest seventy-five years ago. On June 8, 1924, George Leigh Mallory and Andrew "Sandy" Irvine were last seen climbing toward the summit of Mount Everest. Clouds soon closed around them, and they vanished into history. Ever since, mountaineers have wondered whether they reached the summit twenty-nine years before Edmund Hillary and Tenzing Norgay. On May 1, 1999, Conrad Anker, one of the world's strongest mountaineers, discovered Mallory's body lying facedown, frozen into the scree and naturally mummified at 27,000 feet on Everest's north face. The condition of the body, as well as the artifacts found with Mallory, including goggles, an altimeter, and a carefully wrapped bundle of personal letters, are important clues in determining his fate. Seventeen days later, Anker free-climbed the Second Step, a 90-foot sheer cliff that is the single hardest obstacle on the north ridge. The first expedition known to have conquered the Second Step, a Chinese team in 1975, had tied a ladder to the cliff, leaving unanswered the question of whether Mallory could have climbed it in 1924. Anker's climb was the first test since Mallory's of the cliff's true difficulty. In treacherous conditions, Anker led teammate Dave Hahn from the Second Step to the summit. Reflecting on the climb, Anker explains why he thinks Mallory and Irvine failed to make the summit, but at the same time, he expresses his awe at Mallory's achievement with the primitive equipment of the time. Stunningly handsome and charismatic, Mallory charmed everyone who met him during his lifetime and continues to fascinate mountaineers today. He was an able writer, a favorite of the Bloomsbury circle, and a climber of legendary gracefulness. The Lost Explorer is the remarkable story of this extraordinarily talented man and of the equally talented modern climber who spearheaded a discovery that may ultimately help solve the mystery of Mallory's disappearance.

On Feminism and Nationalism Kartini (Raden Adjeng) 2005 The letters Raden Ajeng Kartini wrote from her home in East Java to Stella Zeehandelaar, the 'modern girl' in Amsterdam, are amongst the most powerful and stirring of the many letters she wrote in the last four years of her life. They express both her passionate hope and powerful aspiration to bring about change - in her own life, to the position of Javanese women, to colonised Java - and reflect the deep disappointment she experienced and the compromises she had to make. Inspired by the European feminist writing of her day, these letters reveal how Kartini transformed these ideas into a manifesto for the emancipation of Javanese women and a platform for the decolonisation of Java. They trace the path from personal aspiration to the liberation of all women, from a concern for the position of women, to a radical assessment of colonial politics. This fully revised second edition is prefaced by an historical introduction and a foreword by the Indonesian writer Goenawan Mohamad, and includes the two formal memoranda on women's education written by Kartini in 1903.

Letters to Stella Wendy Young 2014-04-27 "Letters to Stella" is the first book created for the "Healing Together" series, which is an ongoing project that was born from the author's participation in the Landmark Self Expression and Leadership Program (01-25-14). Estella Delgadillo Perez (Stella), born March 4, 1970, was taken from us too soon by breast cancer on June 3, 2013, but while on Earth, Stella was able to touch, move and inspire those she came across, even if it was for a brief moment. This book is one part LETTERS written by Stella's loved ones who chose to contribute to this project and one part PHOTOS of this beautiful woman. It is the author's way of making sure memories of Stella live on forever and are shared with others. Those who have lost a loved one can hopefully relate to not wanting to forget that individual. An education fund created by Stella's longtime friend and TBG West family member, Charlotte Ellevold, has been set up for the two children Stella left behind (Jorge Perez, III and Jazmin Perez); if you wish to contribute please make your check payable to VANGUARD 529 COLLEGE SAVINGS PLAN and mail to: TBG West 6077 Bristol Parkway Culver City, CA 90230 They say: "It takes a village to raise a child." This is just one way - all profits from sales of this book will be given to Stella's two children and husband, Jorge Perez. Thank you for your consideration.

The Diaries of Stella Benson: Letters and Other Loose Papers Stella Benson 2020

Kerouac Hassan Melehy 2017-09-21 Given Jack Kerouac's enduring reputation for heaving words onto paper, it might surprise some readers to see his name coupled with the word ♦poetics.♦ But as a native speaker of French, he embarked on his famous ♦spontaneous prose♦ only after years of seeking techniques to overcome the restrictions he encountered in writing in a single language, English. The result was an elaborate poetics that cannot be fully understood without accounting for his bilingual thinking and practice. Of the more than twenty-five biographies of Kerouac, few have seriously examined his relationship to the French language and the reason for his bilingualism, the Qu♦bec Diaspora. Although this background has long been recognized in French-language treatments, it is a new dimension in Anglophone studies of his writing. In a theoretically informed discussion, Hassan Melehy explores how Kerouac's poetics of exile involves meditations on moving between territories and languages. Far from being a na♦ve pursuit, Kerouac's writing practice not only responded but contributed to some of the major aesthetic and philosophical currents of the twentieth century in which notions such as otherness and nomadism took shape. Kerouac: Language, Poetics, and Territory offers a major reassessment of a writer who, despite a readership that extends over much of the globe, remains poorly appreciated at home.

Letters from Stella Betty Oglesbee 2014-12-02 As World War II ended, who could have anticipated that two young girls from totally different worlds, living oceans apart, could become friends as the result of a tiny bag filled with soap and toothpaste? Perhaps this unlikely event "just happened," or perhaps it was meant to be. Dr. Stella Zacharioudakis Van Praagh became a world renowned pediatric cardiologist. Her story is one of determination, perseverance, and a lifetime commitment of service to others through medicine and medical research. In her early letters written between 1946 and 1955, a glimpse of Stella's future odyssey of achievement is clearly evident, revealing the personality of one who was the epitome of intelligent compassion.

Ah, Can, Ah! Stella Katz Two friends exchanging opinions, thoughts, impressions and feelings about Turkish actor Can Yaman in a "stream of consciousness" style correspondence focused on a deeper analysis of Can's personality and acting. That is, we tried to go beyond appearances and explore the essence of his talent. We think that others might also like to read it and thus discover that depth and intensity of the man and the actor they may have overlooked. Memory Is a Wonderful Thing Larry Upton 2013-08-24 The title of this book, "Memory Is a Wonderful Thing," is a line from one of the 800 letters written by Stella Minton to her daughter, Betty Upton, over a 32-year period. Many of the highlights in this book come from Stella's letters.

Journal to Stella Jonathan Swift 2013 The Journal to Stella, Jonathan Swift's letters to Esther Johnson, or 'Stella', and Rebecca Dingley, written between September 1710 and June 1713, offers an extraordinary commentary on Swift's experiences in London during the most politically active and exciting years of his career and evidence of his evolving relationship with the two women. This edition seeks for the first time both to situate the letters alongside Swift's other works and to place them within their original political, historical and cultural contexts. It brings together a combination of printed work and manuscript to present the most complete and accessible text possible, enhanced by the use of the latest digital image analysis techniques to reinstate previously indecipherable material. In addition to a new critical introduction and appendices, there is also a biographical appendix derived from recently available resources.
