Mar 29, 2020 · Karl Barth—one of those smart theologians—"the Church exists by happening. The Church exists as the event of [its] gathering together."1 The Church is not the building, and the Church is not the people; the Church is the interconnection between the people as we gather with one another, in groups of two or three or ten or ten thousand.

Oct 2021 Cong Communications

At no point do they define the church as a building; it is always a group of people. The metaphors describing the church sprinkled throughout the New Testament remind us that it is a people that God is building, not a collection of buildings. We are the church, even when we are not meeting in a designated building.
